French Children Don't Throw Food
Pamela Druckerman

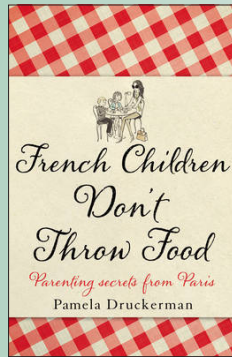

French Children Don't Throw Food by Pamela Druckerman has intrigued me since I first heard the title. As the mother of a charming yet boisterous toddler I immediately longed to read it and it was exactly what I hoped it for: A friendly yet instructive look at how we can pick up tips on child rearing from our less harried cross-channel sisters. I am convinced that this beautifully jacketed little gem, which oozes sophistication, will be helping mothers everywhere regain their equilibrium this spring.

Pamela Druckerman

How do the French manage to raise well-behaved children and have a life! What British parent hasn't noticed, on visiting France, how well-behaved French children are - compared to our own? How come French babies sleep through the night? Why do French children happily eat what is put in front of them? Pamela Druckerman, who lives in Paris with three young children, has had years of observing her French friends and neighbours, and with wit and style, is ideally placed to teach us the basics of parenting a la francaise.

Mummydaddy
Jeremy Howe

Twenty years after his wife was murdered, Jeremy and his girls are not the people they might have been had Lizzie not died. This is the candid, heartrending story of how Daddy became Mummydaddy and the pitfalls along the way. It's a story full of tears, but also of love and family and redemption.

Mum's List
St John Greene

'Kiss boys two times after I have gone.' 'Please teach the boys to say what they mean.' 'Mummy loved orange Club biscuits.' On her deathbed, Kate Greene's only concern was for her two little boys and her loving husband. Over her last few days, Kate created Mum's List. The couple talked and cried together as she wrote her thoughts and wishes down.
